

ABSTRACT

A method and apparatus for identifying a message source in a network is provided including receiving a method call from a client computer to invoke an object on a data server, packaging the method call in a 5 message to be sent from a client server to the data server via the network, on the client server, identifying the client computer from an execution stack, and transmitting the message to the data server.